DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 7-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Stephenson.

The patent to Stephenson discloses a method of conducting a tournament. The tournament may include poker, col. 3, line 37. The tournament is played over the Internet wherein a selected number of players participate, col. 4, lines 59-61. The players play a round of poker 20 that includes a series of games, col. 3, lines 62-63. The players attempt to obtain a sufficient number of points during the course of play. Points are assigned to players during the course of the tournament, see example col. 4, line 54 to col. 5, line 53. Players with the highest total number of points, (e.g. Player C 400 points, Player D 525 points), are selected as winners, while the players with the lowest total number of points (e.g. Player A 75 points) are eliminated. Thus, points are assigned to players according to the order in which the players are eliminated. One winner may be selected as the player with the highest total number of points (e.g. Player D 525 points). An award is distributed to the players that are not eliminated 50, col. 4, lines 47-50.

It is well known in the casino poker tournament art to require a player to place a stake or fee to participate in a casino poker tournament. In view of such teaching, it would have been obvious to play Stephenson's poker tournament in a casino environment wherein players are required to place a stake or fee to participate in the poker tournament. The player with the highest total number of points (e.g. the last player not eliminated) would have been awarded prize money obtained from the fees collected. This modification would have made Stephenson's poker tournament more exciting to play.

In regard to claim 10, determining what type of point system to use (e.g. awarding the lowest number of points to the player that is not eliminated, or awarding the highest number of points to the player that is not eliminated) in Stephenson's poker tournament would have simply been a casino management decision, which is always obvious in the art.

Concerning claim 12, it is well known in the casino poker game art, that when a player is eliminated from or voluntarily leaves a casino poker game leaving a seat empty at the poker table, a different player may be selected to replace the eliminated player, and occupy that seat. In view of such teaching, it would have been obvious to replace an eliminated player, in Stephenson's poker tournament, with a selected different player. This modification would have made Stephenson's poker tournament continuously open to new players, thereby increasing revenue.

3. Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Stephenson in view of Orenstein.

The patent to Orenstein discloses an apparatus for conducting a poker tournament comprising a poker table 10 having card receiving stations 12, and closed circuit television cameras 24 oriented to view the value of the hidden cards 18 of each player, thereby displaying to an audience the value of the hidden cards of each player.

In view of such teaching, it would have been obvious to conduct Stephenson's poker tournament on Orenstein's poker table. This modification would have allowed an audience to view the value of the cards of each player, thus making Stephenson's poker tournament more entertaining to an audience, and thus more popular.

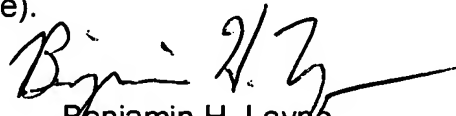

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. The patent to Nakagawa discloses a poker tournament method wherein player are eliminated.
